

Dr. Robert Koenigsberg, Interventional Neuroradiologist
Hahnemann University Hospital

Dr. Robert Koenigsberg is highly respected by his professional colleagues, patients, residents and fellows for the consistently excellent quality of his work in a specialty where patients are always high-risk. As an interventional neuroradiologist, treating patients with brain aneurysms and other life-threatening conditions, he is fearless while performing life-saving procedures. Dr. Koenigsberg's innovative spirit is illustrated by his willingness to perform novel procedures. In one example, Dr. Koenigsberg was asked to operate on a 3-year-old girl with a gunshot wound late one night over the Fourth of July weekend. Without hesitation, Dr. Koenigsberg performed the surgery that saved her life. This story is just one illustration of the dedication, courage and extraordinary skill that Dr. Koenigsberg exhibits in his work every day.

He conducts his practice with the utmost integrity, keeping the best interests of his patients at the forefront and maintaining relationships of mutual respect with his professional colleagues.
